

...in a dream both strange and new,
He found himself in a courtyard view.
Stone walls, gray as the night,
Towers rose, gates out of sight.

There, right in the middle, a sight of blur,
A gentle fox, with rust-red fur.
It moved with grace, so soft and light,
Its gaze was warm, its steps polite.

